AI here to stay, will be beneficial if India prepares for it: Chandra

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, 18 December

Tata Sons Chairman N Chandrasekaran on Monday spoke about the significance of artificial intelligence (AI), asserting it is here to stay and it will be beneficial if India prepares for it.

In his address at the JRD Tata Oration, the head of the Tata group also said the global transitions are working in India's favour, giving it the potential to become a force in today's uncertain world, but one of the country's biggest challenges is inclusive growth.

Post the cold war era of relative stability and prosperity, the world appears to have given way to unpredictable conflicts and economic uncertainty, he said, adding that the pandemic resulted in supply chain shocks of gigantic proportion.

"There was an economic slowdown, especially in developed markets. Things seemed to have stabilised, but now we are in the midst of two ongoing wars and there is an ongoing US-China trade stand-off,"

TRANSITIONS PRESENT OPPORTUNITIES FOR GROWTH, FOR INNOVATION AND FOR INVENTING A NEW FUTURE

N CHANDRASEKARAN
Chairman, Tata Sons

'AI to give more jobs than it takes'

Generative AI technology can create more jobs than it is expected to eliminate, Tech Mahindra's outgoing Chief Executive Officer (CEO) CP Gurnani said, even as its ability to wreck the job market has been discussed widely on social media sites. "The use cases of Generative AI are still being defined, which means that it has the potential to create more job opportunities in the future. Undoubtedly, possibilities are just opening, and there is more to come," Gurnani told Reuters in an interview. REUTERS

Chandrasekaran noted.

He said there are also some very important global transitions underway, especially in the areas of AI, energy and global supply chains.

"All these present opportunities for growth, for innovation and for inventing a new future better than the past for all...In this context, India is making significant progress. Economically, we are already the fifth largest. Many things are working for us and going in our favour," he asserted.

On AI, he said it will impact almost every sector and country going forward. It will not only improve productivity but will also create things which were hitherto not seen or imagined.

"There are extreme views on AI. Those who believe it will change the world for the better and those who believe the risks are very high & it will take a significant number of jobs away. There are merits in these arguments but I for one believe that it will be beneficial if we prepare for it," he added.

Citing India's strong macro stability, a healthy banking system, rising share of exports, new capex cycle led by both private and public sectors, rising consumption, and one of the best public digital infrastructure, Chandrasekaran said, "All the global transitions are working in India's favour."

Amazon Pay may launch credit on UPI by H1 of '24

AJINKYA KAWALE
Mumbai, 18 December

Amazon Pay, the payments and financial services arm of e-commerce giant Amazon, is looking to ride the wave of credit on the Unified Payments Interface (UPI) as early as the first half of 2024. The company aims to expand the usage and coverage of credit with this feature.

"The idea is to expand access to credit. It is not just to cater to credit-served customers. I see the biggest promise of the UPI credit line is to expand the usage of credit as well as the coverage of credit," said Mayank Jain, director-credit and lending, Amazon Pay India, in an interaction with Business Standard.

In September this year, the National Payments Corporation of India (NPCI) announced the launch of a credit on UPI feature at the Global Fintech Fest in Mumbai. Jain said the company is working with banks and NPCI to introduce the product to its customers in the first half of 2024.

Amazon Pay operates credit products such as a co-branded

Amazon Pay's Mayank Jain says the firm is working with banks and NPCI to introduce the product to its customers in the first half of 2024 credit card and a 'buy now, pay later' product called Amazon Pay Later, among others.

The company has registered over 8 million customer sign-ups on Amazon Pay Later, whereas the Amazon Pay-ICICI Bank co-branded credit card has a base of over 4 million customers.

"With the UPI credit line, we could see the numbers multiply very soon within the next two to three years. Millions of customers who have a savings account with a bank will get pre-approved credit lines. I believe this number will be a few hundred million customers, if not tens of millions," Jain added.

Meanwhile, Jain believes it is business as usual for the company in the backdrop of the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) increasing the risk weighting for unsecured personal loans and those on credit cards from 100 per cent to 125 per cent.

"Players with irresponsible lending practices having bad debts or high loss rates need to worry about it. We have a healthy risk performance for our programmes with the lenders. If one had poor loss rates, then things would have changed. But nothing changes for us now," he added.

He added that the company is focused on transactions beyond just its parent e-commerce platform Amazon.

"Amazon India is not the only priority for Amazon Pay. The company is trying to serve a larger audience and is now able to offer customers who have signed up for our credit lines to use them at other merchants and not just at Amazon," he explained.
